Creating the future: '2040 Future Plan'

Haeundae will work together with residents and experts to establish a '2040 vision and strategy' plan for the direction of Haeundae's development over the next 20 years. Haeundae District Office plans to discover new areas for sustainable development and improve the quality of life for residents, and propose ways to strategically respond. Until July next year, we will continue to hold discussions and carry out resident awareness surveys through of-line meetings and online platforms.

Towards a sustainable self-contained future city in the new city area

Haeundae has plans for a sustainable development master plan that will solve various problems in the old Haeundae new city area after 25 years of completion. The service period is for one year from this July to June next year, and the service cost is 500 million won. After investigating the infrastructure, buildings, transportation system, humanities, and natural environment of the new city, the area will be reborn as a self-contained city befitting to the regional characteristics of Haeundae.

The "Lungs" of Haeundae: Promoting the designation of Jangsan District Park

In order to systematically preserve Jangsan, the "lungs" of Haeundae, Haeundae is promoting the designation of Jangsan as a District Park. Until now, Haeundae has focused on tourism resources centered on beaches but now feels the need for the development of tourism resources based on forests. When the area becomes a public park, in addition to the preservation of the natural environment Jangsan village and temples can also receive support.

40th anniversary of Haeundae's promotion to district status: From the edge of Busan to a global city

Since old times Haeundae has been popular with people for its mountains, seas, rivers and hot springs. It was promoted to Haeundae-gu (district) status on April 1, 1980, and became an autonomous district in 1988. In 1978, with the incorporation of the Banyeo, Seokdae, Bansong, and Jaesong areas, the population rapidly increased, and in 1980, which was the year its status was promoted to district, the population of Haeundae was 196,807. Since 1991, the population has increased due to the improvement of the residential environment in the Banyeo and Bansong areas and the creation of a new town in the Jwadong area. As of December 31, 2019, the population was 406,102, accounting for 12% of Busan's total population and making it the largest autonomous district in Busan.
